City council votes to aid Corral Ford's move

The City of Lemon Grove officially instituted planned personnel changes at Monday night's City Council meeting.

Several resolutions were passed, giving some personnel additional responsibilities and placing others in new positions. Christine Taub was sworn in as City Treasurer by Finance Director/City Clerk Karen Huff, Assistant City Manager Douglas Yount was named Deputy City Clerk and City Manager Jack Shelver was appointed to the position of City Clerk. Sharon Propati will be the Council Services Clerk and will perform the day-to-day clerical functions of the City, as well as take minutes at the City Council meetings.

Acting as the Redevelopment Agency, the Council voted to assist the owner of Corral Ford, Lud Camp, in moving his car dealership, located at Massachusetts and Broadway, to Federal Boulevard on the Camperland property. Corral Ford is currently located on leased property owned by three different owners, in addition to Camp.

Camp has requested assistance from the City in the amount of $750,000 and has also asked that he not have to bear the cost of any public improvements adjacent to the property.

"This has been in negotiation for some time," said City Manager Jack Shelver. "We are close to what appears to be an agreement in the best interests of the City and without the City's assistance Corral Ford could leave the community."

He also added that the move to Federal Boulevard would be beneficial to Lee White Toyota and "if both Corral Ford and Lee White Toyota do good business, it's beneficial to the City."

Shelver went on to recommend that the Redevelopment Agency not commit to a specific amount of assistance, but indicate that the assistance may include a cash subsidy for private and public improvements ranging from $500,000 to $750,000. The agreement may also include "forgiveness" of public improvement cost that are usually the obligation of the property owner.

Christine Taub takes her oath of office.

Harry Griffen recognized for leadership in water industry

The Association of California Water Agencies (ACWA) has presented its 1991 Distinguished Water Leader Award to Harry Griffen, a longtime director of the Helix Water District and San Diego County Water Authority.

Griffen has more than 40 years of leadership in the water industry. He served as a member of the Helix Water District Board of Directors from 1951-78, including 19 years as board president. He helped guide the district through years of explosive growth and continues to represent the Helix Water District as a director of the San Diego County Water Authority, a position he has held since 1956.

A former Lemon Grove celery rancher, Griffen also served as a director of the Metropolitan Water District of South California since 1963. He recently was elected to his second therm as vice president of the MWD Board of Directors.

"Harry Griffen has the respect and admiration of his colleagues and is a recognized authority on water throughout the state," ACWA President Loren Voth said in presenting the award May 9 at the association's Spring conference in Monterey. "All of his service has been as an unsalaried public official with a total dedication to providing water leadership," he added.

Griffen is working on a book covering the 100-year history of water development in Southern California. The book, entitled "Quest for Water," will be published by the Helix Water District.

The AXW Distinguished Water Leader Award was established in 1975 and recognizes individuals for outstanding achievements in or remarkable contributions to the water industry in California.

Dramatic talents exposed at Golden Avenue!

King Steve, Scott McNugget, Gini Rudesill, Pauline Pennyworth, Alan Cook, Professor Tummyrub, Scott Fontaine and other cast members on the set.

A spaceship's crew, two feuding kingdoms, a patch of Wild Flowers and a horrible Grump invaded Golden Avenue Elementary School last week for five performances of "The Unenchanted Planet."

"The Unenchanted Planet," written and directed by Golden Avenue's own Alan Cook, told the tale of three unfortunate space travelers, Professor Thadeus T. Tummyrub (Yemi Ogunbase), Pauline Pennyworth (Laura Herzig) and Scott McNugget (Lesandro Mena), who are forced to land their spaceship, the U.S.S. Millard Fillmore, on an inhospitable planet with air quality equal to Los Angeles.

Once there, they meet the Fizzlefats, a community of handless green and purple aliens who are presently feuding with their neighbors, the footless yellow and red Snorkledimmers. The root of the Snorkledimmer's and Fizzlefat's feud is that each has a plant that would restore the hands and feet of the others, and neither group will allow the other access to it. To compound this problem, the planet is also inhabited by a terrible Grump who, with the aid of his Grumpies, eats Snorkledimmers and Fizzlefats. The only way to stop the Grump is to shower him with the pollen produced by the outrageously vampy Wild Flowers.

Eventually, the humorous

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Sailor for a Day

I was extremely fortunate to be selected as a participant on a "Guest of the Navy" cruise the first week of May. Invitations were sent to me as the President of the Lemon Grove Kiwanis Club. I quickly grabbed the first application form, and was very pleased to go to sea with our Navy.

These trips are usually form three to five days. They will either depart and return to San Diego, or a cruise might begin here and terminate in Long Beach or some other port. The latter trips must have a means where by the guest could return home on their own. They are usually training cruises with drills, inspections and various types of simulated problems that would occur at sea. The ship that I boarded was the USS Marvin Shields FF 1066 (a Fast Frigate). My wife drove me down the the Naval Station, where I was met by and Ensign John Ritchie, who drove me to the ship. On board, I met the Executive Officer, Marc Ulander, and the Captain Mike Simpson, both very courteous and willing to answer my questions. I was assigned to a stateroom in the officers country, and given the bottom bunk. Lt. Roberts, the Engineering Officer, had the top bunk.

Underway at 8:30 a.m., the tugs pushed and pulled the ship out into the harbor where its steam power plant took over. We passed the tip of Point Loma an hour later, to the minute. After we cleared the swells that are so common close into land, the sea became very calm and was a pleasant ride from then on. The drills began almost immediately. Fire drills saw hose payed out along passageways, and the men in various types of protective clothing. General Quarters were called, with battle station assignments to be completed as soon as possible. Six minutes was the best time achieved, and much to my surprise, the captain wanted it better. This training and the testing of equipment occupied most of the time, and to this layman, the officers and crew performed perfectly. Everyone was very professional and the many systems were amazing to see in aciton.

All of my questions were patiently answered. The ship was very clean and I had ample opportunity to observe as I was virtually "lost" several times. Everyone that I met was helpful and did not just give me directions, but rather, would lead the way for me. I asked about the Sick Bay, since that was my job in the old Navy. It seems that the second Class Petty officer who was normally assigned there with a Chief, had broken his leg playing basketball, and so, was absent. I whipped out my little blue discharge card that indicated my rate as being Second Class, and told the Chief on duty, "I'm the replacement" ... They didn't need me.

Dinner was a large platter of chicken, sweet corn, salad, fires, ice cream and cookies. First Class Merriman, with helpers Holdeman and Nelson certainly know how to put on a meal. The following morning, I had my breakfast in the crew's mess which was superb. I don't know what they had in the wardroom about us, but it couldn't have been better.

During the night, the ship remained underway, as was continually being put through drills. From the bridge we seemed to be surrounded by other ships, The Vincennes, the Witchita and the Fletcher were the only three that were out there. Testing back up steering systems, plotting and putting the ship through her paces went on continuously. This was a working cruise and I was very happy to be able to observe. Lt. Erikson and a First Class named Boon gave me an in-depth briefing in the sonar room and explained the offensive weapons' capabilities. Very awesome, and comforting to know that we have such men and machines. A weapons officer, Crit Butler explained much of the above-deck structure, and assigned me to #12 life raft, in case we had to abandon ship. Lt. Rubin assured me that it wouldn't happen. Other helpful officers were Mark Hagenlocher, Dan Mitchell, Dan Andreika, and a Chief who presented me with a cap. Crew members Baca, Hullgren, Burns, Gentry, Lopez, Brown and many more, were very helpful.

The only disappointing things about the trip were 1.) Not long enough, 2.) I never did find the "relative bearing grease," or the "key to the chain locker" ... and I never lid get to meet the "Jack of the Dust."

Thanks, captain and crew of the "Marvin Shields" for a most informative and happy trip. I would love to do it again.

Sidewalk Saga

The saga of the San Miguel sidewalks is proving to be somewhat of an enigma.

At first blush, the Council thought that it had really won a major concession from the Water Authority when we got them to promise to fully complete the curb, gutter and sidewalk on both sides of San Miguel Avenue after the pipeline was completed. This was to compensate those residents along the street who were to be impacted by the construction. Where, in another situation, the owner of the frontage along the street would have had to pay for those improvements, these were to be free.

Obviously, this work would improve each parcel's value, and make for a safer and prettier street. This was a firm age. The intent is to help sooth the discomforts of our city in being selected to be sliced through with a twenty-foot trench from one corner to the other.

The glitch is that some properties will have to be dedicated to the City so that the work can be performed, and although the slivers of land along the street will in no instance be more than five feet in depth, it will include some fences, walls or plantings.

Due to the patchwork of property lines that have been drawn over the years, the actual edge of the street is a zig zag depending upon when the lots were laid out. If one looks up or down the street from a point where there is a sidewalk existing now, it can be seen that some lawns, fences, etc., do encroach over that straight line of sight. This does not mean that all of the strip where the sidewalk would go is privately owned or city property. Some is, and some is not. Some lawns and fences are now on property NOT owned by the resident using it. Where the homeowner does own the strip, they will be asked to dedicate that portion so that the free sidewalks can be legally constructed.

At the present time, our city staff will begin to contact every property owner along San Miguel, between Massachusetts and Main Street, that does not have a sidewalk existing in front of their home. As stated above, where dedication is necessary, it will be requested, and relocation of existing appurtenances will be sincerely addressed.

There may be such things as a tree that will have to be trimmed or moved, if possible, the City is trying to accomplish something that will be of benefit and will do all that it can to avoid disruption or destruction of existing front yards. If those properties that are actually not owned by the frontage residents are disrupted, it is the impression of this councilman that the city should make an effort to do the same, nonetheless. I have a ten-foot strip in front of my house that I have sown in ice plant and have a parking area constructed on land that I do not own. If the street is widened or if a sidewalk is ever put in place, I will have to relinquish that ten feet, and also pay for the improvement. In the same situation on San Miguel, the cost of improvements are to be absorbed by the Water Authority, so it is hoped that a spirit of cooperation between resident and city can see the project through in a friendly fashion.

When Mr. Shelver or Mr. Yount, or whoever, knocks on your door, please understand what we are trying to do, and know that we have the best interests of all at heart. No one is trying to do anything underhanded or to harm anyone. We have extracted this commitments from the pipeline contractors, and simply wish to see it taken advantage of to make our town safer and more beautiful. Your council believes in this project and stands behind the staff. If we try, we can survive this large wound that will be inflicted upon our community from sometime to come, and the entire region will be the better for it with the additional water that it will bring to our parched County.

We may not be thanked extensively by the other areas that will benefit from the project without any harm, but we will know.

Councilman Bob Burns will address matters of concern to Lemon Grove and its citizens. If you have questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946.

Jail for the mentally ill?

by Paul Treske

When a sex scandal in city hall reaches the front pages, you can expect it to remain on the pages of your daily paper until the last drop of titillation has fallen. But when it's a story regarding mental heath and its problems, a one-shot is all it usually gets. Only the social workers care, after that.

So it was, with a story that hit our papers last week declaring that "nearly three times as many people in California get their psychiatric treatment behind bars than in mental health hospitals." This is a horrendous indictment of our society and our government, but nary a word has appeared about it since.

With much of American law based on the concept that a mentally ill individual should not be held legally responsible for his acts, the fact that up to 15,000 seriously mentally incapacitated individuals are being held in jails throughout the state is inexcusable in a so-called civilized society.

For those who care to remember, the problem started back in the '70s when California's mental hospitals were largely emptied on the theory that the mentally ill could receive better care in their own communities. The state was to take the money used to maintain the hospitals and disburse it among the counties so that help could be provided at the local level. Thus, was born the concept of "community mental health care."

In theory, it was an excellent idea, but once relieved of the burden of care, the state started almost immediately to renege on funding, leaving more and more responsibility to the increasingly beleaguered counties. With the passage of Proposition 13, that process accelerated. In counties unable to provide adequate psychiatric care, the mentally ill went either minimally served or were bypassed altogether.

Thus, today, we find large numbers of individuals, incapable of coping with independent living, creating the illegal acts that such people commit. Homeless and helpless, they steal, loiter, disrobe in public, strike out and sometimes even kill. With no treatment facilities available, they of course, wind up in jail. Once there, they receive little professional acknowledgment of these problems and, if the crime was minor, are released to continue the cycle. The future would seem to hold even less for them. California's $14 billion deficit promises to give short shift to the less fortunate, with only money for more prisons being sacred. If it is true that we ultimately judge a society on how mercifully it deals with its less-fortunate citizens, then we in California have much to answer for. The problems of mental illness strike almost every family at one time or another, be it a temporary depression, a child with an attention deficit disorder, or a full-blown schizophrenia. We know that, given the right amount of time or treatment, most can recover and lead productive lives. To accept that, in the absence of help, imprisonment is the "final solution" for these, our friends and family members, is a lasting shame on us all. To see documentation of this tragic situation appear in our papers and then disappear again without a murmur, is even worse.

Grad Night: Dodging the Dilemma

by Joseph Walker

My friend - I'll call him Al - had a lot going for him on the night of our high school graduation nearly 20 years ago. He was personable, bright, athletic, good-looking, popular. If anyone in our class seemed destined for future success, it was Al. Today, Al spends most of his time in his parents' basement, staring at the images that flash across their television screen with the same dull, vacant look that has been in his eyes ever since the grad night car accident that left him virtually incapacitated.

Al's parents claim that he had never had so much as a beer before that tragic night, And yet, several of our classmates said they saw him guzzling some pretty heavy duty stuff at a graduation party, just before he wrapped his dad's car around a tree in the mountains east of the high school.

So why did he do it - even that one time? And why do hundreds of similar accidents occur every year, robbing society of some of its most exciting potential?

In our culture, high school graduation is a rite of passage, a processional line of demarcation that separates the girl from the woman and the boy from the man.

Attending a high school commencement is like celebrating an educational bar mitzvah, with the entire graduating class joining for an unspoken, but nonetheless, heartfelt declaration: "Today, I am an adult!"

With diploma in hand and the entire world waiting, each graduating senior faces the same grad night dilemma: What do you do to mark an event of such cosmic significance? This is one time when a trip to the ice cream parlor probably won't suffice. That would be too childish. And there's nothing worse on grad night than "childishness."

Most graduates prefer to observe their new adulthood by doing something ... well, adult. Which is understandable. I mean, the first thing you want to do when you get a new car is to drive it, isn't it? But it's also a little scary, since to many 17 and 18-year-olds thing that doing something as an adult means doing it to excess, and that almost inevitably leads to problems.

For example, I have a hunch that this was all Al was trying to do - to act like a adult, or at least, what he thought an adult acted like. Unfortunately, we'll never know for sure.

That's why I propose that those of us who have been around the block a few times take control of the steering wheel while society's newest adults learn to drive themselves responsibly. I know, I know -- that's much easier said than done. But I think it can happen if you're careful and sensitive. The following are a few suggestions that might help make grad night more fun - and safe - for all of us.

1. Adult's Night Out: Invite your graduate (and a date or a friend, if desired) to join you for a special evening on the town. Take them to your favorite fancy restaurant, the one were you'd never dream of taking the kids. If there's a late-night show or event that you might all enjoy, take it in. Yes, it's going to cost a few bucks. But I think it's worth it if you can have a meaningful experience together - without excess.

2. Grad's Night In: If they're determined to attend a party with a bunch of classmates, make your place available. Now, let me warn you, it's going to be noisy and confusing. But it will also be kind of fun. At the very least, it will be on your turf, where you can have some say about what goes on - beverage-wise and otherwise.

3. Stay in school: One high school I know of, sponsors a big bash for the graduating seniors in its own gymnasium. The party is organized by the previous year's graduating class, and tends to be a little crazier than most at the school. But, once again, there is the benefit of supervision (including standard prohibitions against drugs, alcohol and smoking) and the comfort of familiar surroundings.

4. Graduation Get-Away: One family has a tradition of a father-and-son or mother-and-daughter vacation, beginning with a red-eye flight on grad night. It's not as expensive as it sounds, and the long-term impact on relationships has been tremendous. To cut costs, you could go backpacking or spend a couple of nights at a nearby hotel.

5. Community Bash: Perhaps you could get several service groups or churches to join forces in sponsoring a graduation party in the community. This would have the added attraction of being away from the school, and could serve as a useful bridge in bringing people from throughout the community together for a common cause: our kids.

Er ... excuse me, our newest adults.

Joe Freed on the Movies

What About Bob?

Think about all the irritating people in your life. You know, that friend who calls you thirty times a day to talk about nothing. Your Aunt Mable who covers you with red lipstick. How about the neighbors who lounge around your house when you're busy? Well, if you mixed all of those people together, you still wouldn't come close to Bob Wiley.

Bob (Bill Murray) is a bit more than most shrinks can handle. Neurotic and insecure, his many phobias include fear of elevators, diseases, door knobs, suffocation and anything he's never done before. But after his first session with Dr. Leo Marvin, the brilliant analyst who recently wrote a psychiatric best seller, Bob is convinced that he can be cured. Unfortunately, Dr. Marvin is about to take his family on vacation, and won't be able to see Bob again for a month. Will Bob survive without his "head-shrinker" for thirty days? Will he be able to cope with the loneliness and insecurity? Will he leave Dr. Marvin alone? Of course not! If he did, there wouldn't be a movie.

Tracking Dr. Marvin and his family to their summer home in the country, Bob forces his way into their life and actually manages to win the hearts of the doctor's wife and children. As each day passes, with Bob refusing to leave, Dr. Marvin becomes more frustrated, eventually resorting to guns, dynamite and "death therapy."

Frank Oz (the director of "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" and voice behind Muppet characters Cookie Monster, Grover and Miss Piggy) directed the film from a screenplay by Academy Award winner Tom Schulman ("Dead Poets' Society"). Oz keeps the story moving briskly, often frantically, but is hindered by the screenplay which often misfires. There are moments of hilarity and the characterization is perfect, but Schulman's script never approaches the genius of his past work.

The actors all do their best to keep things rolling and Murray and Dreyfuss make great anti-heros. You feel sorry for Dreyfuss because he has to deal with Murray, but you also hate him for his cruelty and impatience. You feel sorry for Murray in his psychological mess, but can't believe what an incredible bother he is. That's one aspect of "What About Bob?" that's ingenious ... it's a film without heroes. Julie Hagerty ("Reversal of Fortune"), Charlie Korsmo ("Dick Tracy") and Kathryn Erbe (I've never heard of her before) are adequate as the family, although they don't have much to do. The real praise goes to Tom Aldredge and Susan Willis who appear as Mr. and Mrs. Guttman, two locals who hate Dr. Marvin so much that they help Bob ruin the vacation. It seems the Guttman's saved their money for years to buy their dream house, only to have Dr. Marvin snatch it out from under them. Now, they'll do anything to thwart the doctor's happiness, and they almost steal the show.

"What About Bob?" is a good comedy and it's sure to make you laugh. Yes, it has its flaws, but these days, what movie doesn't.

Anderberg Memorial Scholarships awarded

The Lamplighters Community Theatre of La Mesa used the occasion of its May 13 general membership meeting to announce the first winners of the newly-established Cleo Anderberg Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Eric Olson of Grossmont High School and Jessica McNeil of Helix High were introduced as winners of the first two $500 scholarships given in memory of Cleo Anderberg, a longtime Lamplighter member and former La Mesa Community Services Commissioner, who died in November, 1990.

With the scholarships targeted for Helix and Grossmont seniors planning to study some branch of theatre in college, both Olson and McNeil were designated by their respective high school drama coaches as outstanding students in the theatre arts area.

Olson, who has resided in the La Mesa area since second grade, plans to attend UCLA in the fall. Especially interested in the works of Eugene O'Neil and Tennessee Williams, Olson has already tried his hand at playwriting and hopes to get more serious with it in the future. He recalls a fondness for the Lamplighters Theatre, having appeared on that stage at age seven in a children's production.

Anderberg Scholarship winners Eric Olson and Jessica McNeil (center) are introduced at Lamplighters meeting by Vice President Arden Winokur and President Jim Brady.

McNeil, born in Massachusetts, came to La Mesa at age 2 and has received all of her education in the local school districts. She plans to attend Long Beach State in the fall, and is interested in studying all aspects of theatre arts. An actress, she has been involved in every theatrical performance done at Helix during her four years there.

Actual presentation of the scholarships will be made at the respective high school award ceremonies on June 5.

Area queens to compete for Fairest of the Fair

Thirty-three young women from throughout San Diego will compete Friday, May 24, for the dual title of Fairest of the Fair/Miss San Diego County.

As Fairest of the Fair, the winner will be the hostess of the Del Mar Fair, which opens June 18 for a 20-day run. As Miss San Diego County, she will spend the rest of her reign making public appearances at various events.

The 46th-anniversary pageant will be a complete program of entertainment with musical numbers, dancing by the contestants, an evening gown competition, unrehearsed interviews with the finalists and the selection of the winner and her court. Channel 10 television personality Jack White will emcee the pageant, as he has done for the past 16 years. Several former winners will be special guests.

The pageant will begin at 7 p.m. in Bing Crosby Hall on the fairgrounds. Admission is $5. Children 6 to 12 are admitted for $1 and children younger than 6 will be admitted free of charge.

On Thursday, May 23, the contestants will be judged in their sportswear outfits. That part of the competition also begins at 7 p.m.: admission is $1.

This year, 365 women between the ages of 17 and 22 entered 33 San Diego County community pageants. The winners of those pageants are contestants for Fairest of the Fair.

Choosing the Fairest of the Fair has been a Del Mar Fair tradition since 1936. The name, "Fairest of the Fair," was adopted in 1946, the first year the fair was held after World War II. Actress Raquel Welch was named Fairest in 1958 and country singer Barbara Mandrell was a runner-up in 1963.

The reigning Fairest, Jervaun Marino, outgoing Miss La Mesa, will crown the winner.

The 1991 fairest of the Fair will receive many prizes, including a $3,000 scholarship for the fair's Don Diego Memorial Scholarship Trust Fund; $1,500 in cash from the fair; a custom-designed diamond-and-gold crown pendant from Bailey, Banks and Biddle; a portrait from Light Impressions photography studio and entry fees to the Miss California USA pageant. Miss California USA is the preliminary to the Miss USA and Miss Universe pageants.

Representing East County communities will be Marsi Mitrovich, Miss La Mesa; Dancia Yacuzzo, Miss Lemon Grove, Monica McLaughlin, Miss Spring Valley; Marcie Merickle, Miss Alpine; Raelene Buckley, Miss El Cajon, Marci Clothier, Miss Jamul; Joni Smith, Miss Lakeside; and Stephanie Davis, Miss Santee.

Golden Avenue play

script full of singing and dancing leads the feuding kingdoms to the realization that they will have to cooperate to rid themsleves of the Grump.

The cast consists of more than 90 third, fourth and fifth graders who were lucky enough to have their parts written for them.

"Mr. Cook wrote the script with the personalities of the kids in mind," said Gini Rudesill, a third grade teacher who also helped direct, design costumes and construct the elaborate sets.

Cook, who has been teaching for 25 years, said he couldn't find a play he liked, so he decided to write his own.

It took him about four months to write the script and another eight weeks to build the large sets consisting of a spaceship, two castles, a wild flower field and the land of the Grumpies.

Scott Fontaine, a fourth grade teacher, also helped construct the sets and served as the special effects director.

Rudesill said that everyone's family and friends were drafted to help with all aspects of the production and joked that she was going to take one of the castles home to live in.

Over 100 Junior Girl Scouts and their leaders from the Lemon Grove Service Unit gathered at Indian Hills in Jamul for their annual Jr. Encampment. This year's theme "Keys to Peace" was carried out in many ways over the weekend, including this giant peace sign.

Grossmont Hospital celebrates life

Diana Golden, world disabled ski champion 1986-1990, will be the featured speaker for the "Festival of Life" sponsored by the Center for Cancer Treatment at Grossmont Hospital.

Her talk, scheduled for June 1 at 11 a.m., will be one of several events celebrating life and honoring those who have struggled with cancer. After losing her right leg to cancer at age 12, Golden developed a passion for ski racing while a junior in high school. Her unbeatable spirit led her to become an Olympic gold medalist, a ten-time world championship event gold medalist and a 19-time winner of the U.S. national event championship.

She was the first disabled skier to win top awards from the Women's Sports Foundation, U.S. Ski Association, U.S. Olympic Committee, Ski Racing Magazine and U.S. Ski Writers. A dynamic speaker, the 27-year-old Golden has motivated audiences across the nation and serves as a spokesperson for the disabled as well as for the sport of skiing.

Grossmont's "Festival of Life" will be presented in support of Survivors' Day, sponsored by the San Diego chapter of the American Cancer Society, and will be held form 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the hospital's Brier Patch campus, 9000 Wakarusa St., La Mesa. It will include information booths, refreshments and entertainment by clowns, jugglers and a one-man band. A panel of cancer survivors will share how they successfully overcame cancer, and a physician will sign "certificates of courage" for cancer survivors and family members. Also, "therapy" dogs will be available for petting and will pull carts in which small children will be able to ride. The festivities will conclude with the flying of kites provided free by Grossmont Hospital.

Pre-register for this event by calling 598-4489, and your name will be entered into a drawing for prizes.

Foothills hosts artist demonstration

Foothills Art Association has announced its next artist demonstration and its featured artist for the month. An artist demonstration is a part of each regular meeting. The next demonstrating artist will be Robert Landry, who provides a demonstration to this group each June. Bob Landry has taught art for over 25 years. Many Foothill's artist learned their technics from Bob Landry. You shouldn't miss this event Thursday, June 6 at 7 p.m. He will amuse you as he produces his watercolor.

Most months Foothills Art Association has a featured artist from its membership. This month's artist is Farzan Salehi. Mr. Salehi is an abstract artist working in oils. He received awards while a student at Grossmont College. This show, a presentation of the artist's best work, will begin on Friday, June 7 and continue Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. through July 3. Other members of Foothills will submit previously unseen work for this show and for judging by the viewing public.

Persons interested in Foothills Art Association should attend the regular monthly meeting on Thursday, June 6 at 7 p.m. in the adjacent auditorium. The gallery is located at 8051 University Avenue between Allison and Baltimore. For more information, call Teresa at 660-0889.
